Method of submitting applications:

- e-application submitted via the IS MU,
- additional materials as specified in Conditions for Admission to Doctoral Study Programmes (DSP) of the Faculty of Economics and Administration for the Autumn semester 2019,
- a fee of 600 CZK (paid via the Business Centre of the IS MU).

Entrance examination date: 21. 1. 2020

The entrance examination to the doctoral study programmes at the Faculty of Economics and Administration consists of the following:

- specialised examinations to verify expert knowledge of the applicant (in compliance with requirements stipulated for individual programmes),
- panel discussions with the intent of examining the suitability of an applicant for creative scientific work and their motivation for study in a DSP (based on submitted materials stipulated for individual specialisations),
- English language examination, whose aim is to examine the ability of applicants and their level of English including their knowledge of basic economic terminology; in the case where an applicant provides a certificate of passing an English language test, the English language examination can be recognised based on their certificate.

The examination committee, which is appointed for individual fields of study in the DSP by the dean, following the recommendation of the chairperson of the doctoral board, has at least three members.

The entrance examination is evaluated by the following:

- specialised examination 20%
- panel discussions 70%
- English language examination 10%.
