

We're celebrating the Compostela Group's Day: get to know a network offering opportunities to our University community

The association offers International training opportunities for students and staff, visibility in the international arena, recruiting of experts for EC funded initiatives and much more

Today, 21st January 2015, is the Compostela Group's Day, a great opportunity to let you know about this dynamic and inclusive network to which our University belongs. Don't miss the many opportunities they offer!

The Compostela Group of Universities (CGU) is a prestigious 20 year-old international association of higher education institutions aimed at fostering cooperation and promoting dialogue in all fields of knowledge. It was created as an initiative of the University of Santiago de Compostela, and currently brings together 66 universities from 28 different countries.

The CGU organizes activities focused on the different groups of the university community: it offers opportunities to participate in international projects (funded by the European Commission or initiatives between its members), international training and professional development (through Stella and Stella Junior Programmes) and worldwide recognition and promotion (International Prize Grupo Compostela-Xunta de Galicia, Video Contest for Students, publications, etc.). Besides, it provides access to a diverse and wide database of universities and sets up links with other networks, enterprises and official institutions.

Please, download the Compostela Group's Newsletter for Staff or their Newsletter for Students to find targeted information for you about these activities. Further details on the Group and its initiatives are at www.gcompostela.org, through noelia.martinez.cagiao@usc.es or following the network on the social media: Facebook, Facebook for Students, Twitter and LinkedIn.
