

River bottom is a basic habitat of running waters. Cross-section geometry of river bed and structure of sediments represent the factor determining composition of the living component in the river ecosystem.