- ◉ <http://monarchie.nm.cz/en/the-monarchy/>
- ◉ <http://monarchie.nm.cz/en/>
- ◉ Location: National Museum's new building, Vinohradská 1, 110 00, Praha 1

- ◉ The main objective of the exhibition “Monarchy” is to introduce to visitors the period in our history which showed significant traces of tradition, which, however, did not prevent the turbulent modernization process of the whole society. During the second half of the nineteenth century, the territory of the Czech lands faced changes that seemed to be the opposite of conservative values; nevertheless they brought development of the whole state and society in a number of sectors such as industry, science, culture and others. At the same time, the process of formation of the modern Czech society, which at that time was reaching the peak of its cultural and national emancipation, was completed - and all that was happening within the boundaries of the traditional Habsburg monarchy.
- ◉ Visitors to the exhibition will see unique objects associated with the Emperor and his family, for example a dress of Empress Sissi, or a pencil the Emperor wrote with. Alike, the visitors will see many objects relating to the everyday life of the monarchy inhabitants. These objects will draw a visitor into a variety of contemporary social spheres. Thus the visitors will have the opportunity to look at a historical post office or a modern kitchen. The exhibition will bring them to a railway station, to a village, but also to a castle or a factory. Last but not least, the exhibition will present the period of 1848 - 1918 not only as a time of a great political and economic transformation, but it will also enable its visitors to look into the private world of our great-grandmothers and great-grandfathers.
