

11. Differences in cultural values, communication and learning styles in an intercultural classroom setting.

In an intercultural classroom setting various cultural groups bring into class different communication and learning styles, ways of problem-solving and task engagement. The first source goes to an American classroom to show examples of such cultural differences. When differences in cultural values, communication and learning styles are not recognized, they lead to critical incidents and create communication barriers. The source 2 through 4 are critical incidents that you will be asked to solve in teams.
