The various styles of writing (differences between academic writing and writing of a research proposal). A different types of linking words. A usual mistakes which often are being made during writing a research proposal (not a clear message, not clear goal, not persuasive arguments...) Important event of today's lesson is that each of us tried to present him/her own academic poster :-)) and we got a feedback from our colleagues.

Mostly some tips and where I can learn and find more help with my academic writing. I expect I will return and reuse the interactive syllabus of this course in the future.

I have gained better insight into project/grant writing, what to pay attention to, and how to prepare it in a good way.

I think, that the presentation of the poster was the most beneficial and that it is an important task which a phd student has to manage to succeed in research carrier. Also the feedback from the colleagues and teacher is very helpfull.

I have enjoyed most the interactions between participants during the workshops. I expect to use some study materials from the course for my future article writing.

I liked the most the second and the third session. I think everything we have mentioned today is beneficial for me and I will try to use it in the future. Also, I think we have got the access to many useful materials and exercises that can be incorporated into my future work.
