

Future 1

A Will

- 1 We can use will + the infinitive (without to) to refer to the future. Will is usually shortened in speech and informal writing to 'll. The negative of will is won't.
Ann is leaving tomorrow morning.
HSBC are moving to new premises next year.
- 2 We use will to talk about future events that we see as facts:
In June we will bring out two new models.
Next year I'll be 45.
The government will soon impose an obligation on all electricity supply companies to buy a specified percentage of their power from renewable sources. (Guardian website)
- 3 We use will to talk about future beliefs:
Lynch believes that globalisation and consolidation in the technology sector will create a greater demand for large and powerful bourses. 'Stock markets will have to cover a lot more market capitalisation and smaller markets will have less of a role' says Lynch. (Observer website)
- 4 We can add perhaps/maybe or probably to make the belief less certain:
The first wave of job losses resulting from the mergers in German banking will probably be in the City of London. (BusinessWeek website)
Notice that probably comes after will but before won't:
He'll probably agree with you.
He probably won't agree with you.
- 5 We can use will with an introductory phrase to give other meanings. For example, a personal opinion (I think) or a hope (I hope):
I think we'll probably open a subsidiary in Russia next year.
I hope he'll agree with you.
- 6 Will can be used for instant decisions and thoughts that come into our head at the moment of speaking.
I'll wait for you outside.
I'll phone you tomorrow.
I think I'll stop now.

B Going to

- 1 We use the verb be + going to + the infinitive to make a connection between the present and the future.
- 2 We use going to for plans and intentions. These are things we have already decided to do.
I believe that Greenspan is going to lower rates. There are some signs of liquidity problems in the credit markets at this point in time, and a smart central bank responds by easing credit. (New York Times website)
The time in the future can be near or distant:
I'm going to call Fiona Clarke this afternoon.
We're going to open a factory in Hungary next year.
- 3 We use going to to make predictions when there is some evidence in the present situation:
Be careful! It's going to fall. (I can see it)
I think we're going to lose this deal. (I've just heard some news)

C Present continuous

- 1 We can use the present continuous tense to talk about things we have arranged to do in the future. There is nearly always a time expression.
Ann is leaving tomorrow morning.
HSBC are moving to new premises next year.
The arrangements are often social arrangements or appointments.
What are you doing on Tuesday afternoon?
I'm seeing Jack at two, and after that I'm meeting my bank manager.

D Will or going to?

- 1 Will is used for instant decisions. Going to is used for plans and intentions.
Compare:
OK, I know what to do. I'll call Jane. (an instant decision)
Do you have the information for Jane? I'm going to call her this afternoon. (an intention)
- 2 Will is used for general beliefs, opinions, hopes and things the speaker sees as facts.
I'm sure they'll like the new design.
In the future, more people will work from home.
- 3 When will is used with a phrase like I think and/or words like probably then the belief/opinion becomes less certain, like a prediction.
I think you'll like this idea.
The world will probably end in about five billion years.
But if there is strong evidence in the present situation then going to is usually used for predictions:
I think it's going to rain. (I can see black clouds)
We're going to make a loss on this project. (I have the figures in front of me)
- 4 There are occasions when we can use either form:
In my presentation I'll talk/I'm going to talk about three main areas. First, ...
Here the speaker could see it as a fact (will) or an intention (going to).
- 5 Will is more usual in writing. 'll and going to are more usual in speech.

E Going to or present continuous?

- 1 For future plans and arrangements there is often little difference between going to and the present continuous.
I'm going to give/I'm giving my presentation on Friday.
- 2 Going to can suggest that the details of the arrangement have not been finalised. The present continuous can suggest that the arrangement is more fixed, with a time and a place.
I'm going to meet him next week. (just a plan – time and place are still unknown)
I'm meeting him at ten in my office. (a definite, fixed arrangement)

F Time expressions

- 1 Common time expressions for the future include: tomorrow, the day after tomorrow, on Friday, at the weekend, next week, in a few days' time.

Future 2

A Future: time expressions

We use the present simple or the present perfect (not will) to refer to the future after these words: when, after, before, unless, in case, as soon as, until, by the time, the next time:

When I see her, I'll tell her you called.

We'll discuss it again after you get back.

As soon as I've finished the report, I'll email it to you.

You can wait here until she comes back.

Notice that a future form (will, can) is used in the other part of the sentence.

B Present simple/continuous

We often use the present simple (or present continuous) when we talk about events in the future based on a fixed timetable, programme or calendar:

Jim's plane leaves (is leaving) at 12.15.

Our boss retires (is retiring) next year.

C Future continuous

The future continuous is formed with will + be + the -ing form of the verb:

One thing that is clear is that more and larger Taiwanese companies will be investing in China and that the new government will allow them to. (Asiaweek website)

The future continuous describes an activity in progress in the future.

We often use it when we compare what we are doing now with what we will be doing in the future. There is nearly always a time expression.

Next year I'll be working in our São Paulo office.

Where will you be working in six months' time?

The future continuous is often used to say that something will definitely happen:

We'll be holding a meeting soon, so we can make a decision then.

D Future perfect

The future perfect is formed with will + have + past participle:

By the time I retire, I'll have been in banking for over thirty years.

By the year 2020 the volume of goods produced by traditional manufacturing worldwide will probably be at least twice what it is today. But in the US, the share of manufacturing in GDP, which is still around 15% or so, will have shrunk to 5%. (IndustryWeek website)

We use the future perfect to look back from one point in the future to an earlier event or period of time. We often use by or by the time with the future perfect:

By the time we prepare our proposal they'll have found another supplier.

By the end of the year we'll have sold around 1,000 units.

It is common to use a simple will form in place of the future perfect, although some people think this is not grammatically correct:

By the time we've prepared our proposal they'll find another supplier.

By the end of the year we'll sell around 1,000 units.

We use the continuous form of the future perfect to look back from one point in the future at an activity in progress:

Next year we'll have been manufacturing the same model for ten years.

E Was going to

Was/were going to is not a future form. We use it to refer to something that we planned in the past but did not do:

I'm sorry, I was going to phone you this morning, but I had to see one of our clients.

F Other ways to talk about the future

We often use modals and related verbs like should, be likely to, could, may, might to refer to the future. See unit 13.

We use the verbs expect, hope, intend, would like, plan, want followed by an infinitive (to do) to refer to the future:

German automaker BMW is planning to build a production plant in Central or Eastern Europe by the middle of 2001 – and the Czech Republic is hoping to get the contract. (praguepost website)

Notice the negative forms:

I expect/hope I won't ...

We don't intend/plan/want to ...

I wouldn't like to ...

We can use the verb think followed by 'll:

I think/don't think I'll change my Internet Service Provider.

We can use be due to for things that we expect to happen:

Mr Welch, who hits GE's mandatory retirement age of 65 next month, has built GE into America's No. 1 company in stock market valuation. He is due to name the next chairman and chief executive of GE in the next few days. (Wall Street Journal Europe website)

We can use be about to for things that will (will not) happen very soon:

A look at the stock-market valuations of big software houses such as Cisco and Oracle show that the pace of development in new technology is not about to slow. (Forbes.com website)

In modern English Shall I/we ...? are used to make suggestions, not to refer to the future.

Shall I open the window?

Shall we meet again next week?

Shall is still used for the future in formal situations, for example legal documents.
