

Translations.

1. The tax adviser stresses that it is essential to keep records that reflect the financial life in the business accurately enough to enable people to file/so that it is possible to file a tax return.
2. British merchant banks raise funds for industry, finance international trade, issue and underwrite securities, deal with takeovers and mergers, and issue government bonds.
3. The chances of jobs disappearing, incomes falling, and, consequently, families breaking up and networks of social relations disintegrating, have not been higher since the war.
4. As the economy was recovering, employment rose very quickly and it also had the positive effect that the number of long-term unemployed people plunged.
5. Individually neither of the two European companies would be able to tackle or match the performance of the Japanese competitors, so they merged to become a world player.
6. Companies wishing to raise more money for expansion can sometimes issue new shares, which are normally offered first to existing shareholders at less than their market price.

Prepositions

1. We need to pay monthly interest on the loan.
2. They delivered the project on time and on budget.
3. We need to take on some staff as we are severely understaffed.
4. They cannot afford to run over schedule.
5. Do they plan to go into partnership with a rival company?
6. We are going to take on/over the project in June.
7. They went out of business in 2005.
8. The report was circulated for the consideration of industry organizations, tax courts and authorities, and was subject to criticism.
9. With Dave unemployed, we haven't got much money coming in at the moment.
10. We do business over the Internet.
11. Wages are failing to keep up with inflation.
12. These students fall into three categories.
13. Land reform brought about a great change in the lives of the common people.
14. That new song is beginning to catch on.
15. I have extended my Master's dissertation into a doctorate.
16. This year's team, coached by Jeff Jackson, consisted entirely of college players.
17. In 2009 iPhone games accounted for 19 percent of total revenues in the US portable games software market.