European Union Public Policy

Professor John Wilton

Lecture 7
Policy decision-making 2: decision-making in the European Parliament

European Union Public Policy Lecture 7

1. Decision-making in the European Parliament;

2. The relationship between the European Parliament and the national Member state parliaments

European Union Public Policy Lecture 7

- The change in the inter-institutional dimension of the E.U.

- 3 organisational and behavioural aspects of policy decision-making in the European Parliament:

  a) committee work;

  b) the division of labour within political party groups;

  c) the building of majorities

European Union Public Policy Lecture 7

a) Committee work in the European Parliament

- - 1999 to 2004 European Parliament had 17 permanent committees

- - 1996 temporary committee of enquiry to examine the transit system

- - 1996 temporary committee of enquiry to deal with BSE crisis

European Union Public Policy Lecture 7

b) The division of labour within the political party groups

- political party groups control the agenda of European Parliament AND its internal organisation

- through Conference of Presidents (President of E. P. and chairmen/women of political party groups)

European Union Public Policy
Lecture 6

c) The building of policy and policy decision-making majorities

- necessity to build majority support between national Member state MEP party groups

European Union Public Policy Lecture 7

- main political party groups in European Parliament:

    - social democrats

    - conservatives/Christian Democrats

    - liberals

    - greens

European Union Public Policy
Lecture 7

- strong incentives for cohesive political party groups and for coalition policy decision-making formations

- growing inter-institutional ambitions and influence

- committee influence

- policy decision-making influence

European Union Public Policy Lecture 7

2. The relationship between the European Parliament and the national Member state parliaments

- Maastricht (1993) and Amsterdam (1997) Treaties considerably increased status of European Parliament, especially as a policy decision-making body

- particularly in relation to national Member state parliaments

European Union Public Policy Lecture 7

CONTRADICTION:

- growth in legislative importance of E.U. (and European Parliament)

contradicts with low public perception of importance of E.U. (and European Parliament)
