Norma Jean Baker was born in 1926. She was deeply unhappy at home, and always had (0) memories of her (1) childhood. She started her career as a model, and because she was so (2) she was quickly hired by Ben Lyon of Twentieth Century Fox, one of the most (3) producers in Hollywood, who changed her name to Marilyn Monroe. Her first few films were not particularly good as she was often cast as a dumb blonde and had no chance to show what a (4) actress she was. In the 50s, however, she signed a new contract, and made a number of (5) movies including Some Like it Hot and The Prince and the Showgirl. Her films were immensely (6) and she became the most famous star of her generation. In her personal life, however, she never found the affection she needed. She remained (7) and her two marriages failed. She took pills to get her through her (8) nights and she began to drink heavily. At work she became (9) and difficult to work with, and her reputation began to suffer. In the end, she was abandoned by most of her friends, and on August 5 1962, she was found dead from an overdose of sleeping pills.
