Many years ago, archaeolog	y was about making (0)	discoveries and finding buried treasure. Now	w, however, it has become a more (1)	subject, and archaeologists are becoming increasingly (2) in finding out more about the lives of ordinary people rather than the (3) lives of kings and emperors.
Much of the work of an archaeologist can be tedious and (4); 99% of archaeology is concerned with reading, excavating, recording and classifying, and, unlike the world of Indiana Jones, it is neither thrilling nor (5) (6) of archaeology comes through an (7) stream of new (8), any o	one of which may alter the way we look at h	istory. Even the
