For the first homework, I chose a scenario where customer creates an order in an online candle shop. The customer places the order, then the system checks availability and processes the order, and checks the payment. If payment is unsuccessful, the customer receives a message, if payment is successful, the system generates a bill. After the bill is issued, the system checks whether the customer is eligible for a discount coupon, if yes, the marketing department generates a coupon that is included in the package. After the order is packed, it is handed over to the courier and the customer receives confirmation.
