Valorant

- Free to Play FPS 5v5

Free to Play

– You can download it for free and don't have to pay extra fees in game to enjoy the masterpiece

FPS – First Person Shooter
- Your screen represents vision of your character, trying to imitate real life experience
- The name Shooter stands for the mechanic of shooting from a gun.

5v5 – 5 players vs 5 players (defenders vs attackers)

- 2 teams of 5 players each compete on a map chosen from an actual map pool rotation.
- Everyone in team plays different agent (hero) as well they have different roles assigned, based on agent they chose.
- As you might expect if you play in team the communication is important, In Valorant maybe even more than in other FPS.
- The graphics is a bit cartoonish, but some people prefer this art to escape even more from reality than other games that try to be as real as possible.

After roughly 300 hours of playtime, I realized there are more aspects of the game you can improve at than I could imagine, for example as a beginner there is around 20 agents, everyone with completely different skills, which you must learn otherwise you would get hardly punished by some ability you didn't even know it existed.

The agents are all balanced, even thou everyone sometimes rages over agent which for them seems to strong, just because he doesn't know how to play against it

I would say the game is more strategic/communication based than CS: GO (Counter Strike – Global Offensive, now CS2, which I think most of the gamers know)

The hours I have on the game are not addiction, at least partially not, I just like to improve the things I am currently worst at and climb the rank.

I think if you have never tried it, you definitely should if you liked games like Rainbow Six Siege or already mentioned CS: GO it could be the game you would love.
