Agenda

- Defining civil war
- Causes: grievances vs resources
- Ethnicity and ethnic conflict

Defining civil war

- A conflict between organized groups within a nation-state.
 - International war is between like actors; civil war is usually between a state and non-state opponents who adopt insurgent or terrorist tactics.
- Why is accurate definition crucial?
- Is there always a sharp distinction between internal and international war?
- What distinguishes a civil war from other types of internal contentious politics?

Civil war: causes

- Rationalist vs symbolic explanations
- Grievances
 - Reasons people rebel
- Resources
 - Economic factors as a source of conflict and as a constraint on state's ability to resist rebellion

Grievances

- Grievance: a feeling of being wronged
- Can be political, economic, religious, territorial, ethnic, etc. but often overlap
 - Political: seeking to overthrow the government or reform
 - Economic: seeking to force the government to adopt a different economic policy or address an economic grievance
 - Territorial: fight for autonomy or independence

Why does wealth affect the likelihood of civil war occurrence?

- Poorer governments have lesser ability to address grievances and combat violent movements.
- Poorer individuals are more likely to join violent movements, because they have economically less to lose.
- People are more likely to rebel when their level of wealth departs significantly from their expectations.

Ethnicity

- Primordial school: ethnicity is deeply ingrained in human history and experience; it is a fact of life in the relations between individuals and groups
- Instrumentalists: elites use ethnicity to manipulate and mobilize followers in the pursuit of interests like physical security, economic gains, or political power
 - Suggests that ethnic identities are fluid

Constructivist understanding of ethnicity

- Ethnosymbolism: emphasis on ethnic group bound together by myths and symbols
 - Ethnic group as population sharing common myths about its origins, historical memories, and cultural features (also associated with a territory and has a sense of solidarity)
- Political exploitation of ethnicity is constrained by pre-existing cultural context
- Emotions (not rational calculations) motivate people to act
