

Past simple

We use the past simple to:

- 1 describe finished actions or situations in the past.
- 2 say that one thing happened after another.

Past continuous

We use the past continuous to:

- 1 talk about activities in progress at a moment in the past.
- 2 describe scenes in a story or description.
- 3 talk about an activity in progress when another, shorter activity happened or interrupted it. It tells us that an action was in progress, but not that it was finished.

Present perfect simple

We use the present perfect simple to talk about:

- 1 an experience in someone's lifetime, without saying the exact time when the event occurred.

I've seen Coldplay in concert.

- 2 recent events which have a result in the present.

She's lost her bag. (= She hasn't got her bag right now.)

- 3 actions or situations that began in the past but continue in the present.

Mark's lived here for ten years.

- 4 actions finished very recently.

They've just had an accident.

Grammar reference

For past simple, past continuous and present perfect simple, see page 166.

Present perfect continuous

The present perfect continuous is used in a similar way to the present perfect simple. However, we use the continuous when we want to emphasise the process and duration of an action.

I've been studying in this school for more than five months.

For that reason, if an action is very short, we cannot use the continuous form.

~~I've been breaking the window.~~

We also use the continuous to emphasise that an action finished very recently or is incomplete.

I've been washing the dishes ... and my hands are wet because I only finished a second ago/I still haven't finished.

If we want to emphasise the completion and result of an action, or how many times an action happens, we must use the present perfect simple.

I've painted my bedroom. (It's finished.)

I've seen that film three times.

~~I've been seeing that film three times.~~

Past perfect simple

We use the past perfect simple to talk about actions that happened before another action or actions in the past. It gives importance to the completion of an activity.

When the interview had finished, I left.

Past perfect continuous

We use the past perfect continuous to talk about actions that happened before another action in the past. It gives importance to the duration of an activity.

I was tired because I had been studying all night.

Future activities in the past

Psychologists (a) had been interested in discovering the key to successful lying for a long time, but it still doesn't seem very easy to work out what makes a good liar. Once, Professor Richard Wiseman (b) has done an interesting experiment using television. He (c) interviewed a famous person called Robin Day about his favourite film. In the first interview, Day (d) told Wiseman the truth. He (e) described how he loved the film Some Like It Hot. In the second interview, he (f) lied, telling the interviewer how much he liked Gone With The Wind, even though really he hated it. When they (g) had been finishing the interviews, they (h) asked viewers to watch the two interviews and to decide in which interview Day (i) had been lying. Almost 30,000 people phoned in to vote but the votes were completely divided between the two interviews. It became clear that viewers (j) were simply guessing. Then a surprising thing (k) was happening. On the same day, the two interviews (l) appeared on the radio and in a newspaper. Seventy-three per cent of the radio listeners correctly (m) guessed when Day (n) was lying, and so did 64 per cent of the newspaper readers. Other recent tests (o) have suggested the same conclusion, that body language and facial expressions give little indication of people's sincerity.
