

Material Culture

MUNI, FSS SANb 2032 (lecture 4)

ARCHAEOLOGIES OF THE CONTEMPORARY PAST
VICTOR BUCHLI AND GAVIN LUCAS

Buchli, Victor & Gavin Lucas
(2001). Archaeologies of the Contemporary Past. London:
Routledge.

Figure 14.2 Abandoned bedroom floor. (Photograph by Victor Buchli and Gavin Lucas.)

William Rathje. 'Garbology Project'. Archaeology of Rubbish

Mark Dion
'Rescue Archaeology'

Nancy G. Unobskey '60 Visiting Artist in Modern & Contemporary Art presents

VIRTUAL LECTURE BY

MARK DION

March 11, 2021, 7 p.m., Zoom

More info: www.goucher.edu/MarkDion

GOUCHER | college

Nancy Graves [1939 – 1995]

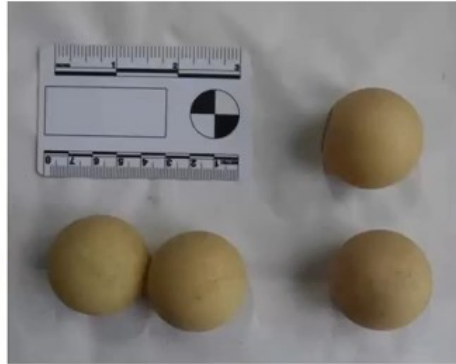

Eva Hesse
[1936–1970]

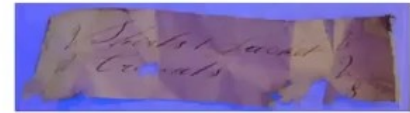

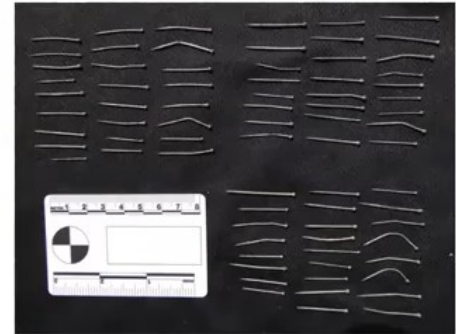

Completed in 1482 for
Sir Edmund Bedingfeld

<https://www.nationaltrust.org.uk/oxburgh-hall>

Anna Forrest

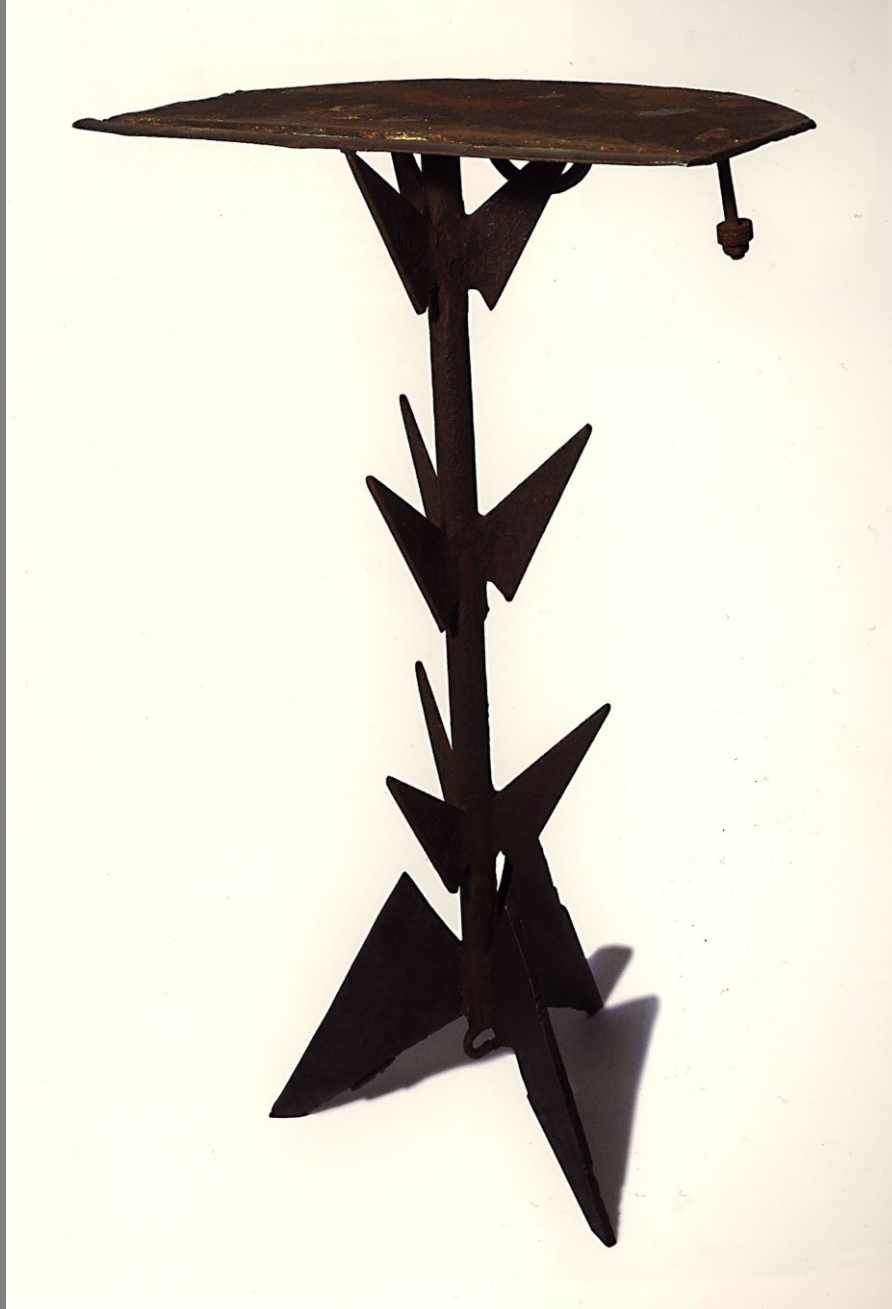

A small selection of finds

David Kemp
Archaeology of the Future

Dan Harding. Creep Table. In the book Transformations

Johnty Henshall
Auction Stand
SAS Longlife Exhibition

Sam Sprague/Linear, Arnhem

© Matt Moyer, Le Caire

Le réseau
ous rapproche

Orange

'Trawlermen' sculpture (Marine Parade, Napier by Alan Strathern 1978)

The Second Life of Things

The artistic transformations of Kiwi canoes

Mobile Sousveillance

Anti social-behaviour

There was some debate after the recent London bombings about the term ‘sousveillance’ and whether it (or perhaps ‘coveillance’, ‘equivveillance’) is appropriate for people keeping an eye on each other, particularly at the police's behest. Whatever term decided upon, it's going to become more common. The Picturephoning website now posts that police are asking people in 2 towns in England to report antisocial behavior via MMS. They're looking for evidence of graffiti, vandalism, fly tipping, etc. so they know where to focus their resources. They emphasize, however, they're not looking for people to get themselves into trouble by trying to catch people in the act, but rather the aftermath/damages.

Youview, the company powering the service, hopes to use these towns as a testing ground, then roll it out for the other 400 Anti-Social Behavior police units in England & Wales. Calls cost 25p.

Swords into Ploughshares. Mozambique