Freedom of Speech I.

Role of mass media in society

- Mass media influence society and people...
 - but we do not know how.
 - reason for regulation
- Media can help understand specific issues in society.
 - Media can help not to understand specific issues in society.
- Public debates on a political question of general importance.
 - What is in public interest?
 - Entertainment - infotainment...
 - Is there anyone who wants to speak?

Stereotypes - responsibility of media

- When they are not under-represented or invisible, women are often represented in the media in roles traditionally assigned by society, portrayed as passive and lesser beings, mothers or sexual objects. These sexist stereotypes in the media perpetuate a simplistic, immutable and caricatured image of women and men, legitimising everyday sexism and discriminatory practices and establishing a barrier to gender equality.
- The media, a vital constituent of democracy, have a particular responsibility in this field to promote respect for human dignity, the fight against all forms of discrimination and equality between women and men.

Marketplace idea - U.S.A. - Competition of ideas

- „Persecution for the expression of opinions seems to me perfectly logical. If you have no doubt of your premises or your power and want a certain result with all your heart you naturally express your wishes in law and sweep away all opposition. To allow opposition by speech seems to indicate that you think the speech impotent, as when a man says that he has squared the circle, or that you do not care whole heartedly for the result, or that you doubt either your power or your premises. But when men have realized that time has upset many fighting faiths, they may come to believe even more than they believe the very foundations of their own conduct that the ultimate good desired is better reached by free trade in ideas-that the best test of truth is the power of the thought to get itself accepted in the competition of the market, and that truth is the only ground upon which their wishes safely can be carried out.“ (Abrams v. United States/Dissent Holmes)
- The classroom is peculiarly the „marketplace of ideas“. The Nation's future depends upon leaders trained through wide exposure to that robust exchange of ideas which discovers truth 'out of a multitude of tongues, [rather] than through any kind of authoritative selection. (512) Tinker v. Des Moines School District

Marketplace - Europe

- Importance of the free press
- The Court emphasises that the promotion of free political debate is a very important feature of a democratic society. It attaches the highest importance to the freedom of expression in the context of political debate and considers that very strong reasons are required to justify restrictions on political speech. Allowing broad restrictions on political speech in individual cases would undoubtedly affect respect for the freedom of expression in general in the State concerned.
(FELDEK v. SLOVAKIA)

Freedom of speech (expression)

- Includes the right to express opinions, right to receive and impart information and to share such information.
 - [The right] guarantees not only the freedom of the press to inform the public but also the right of the public to be properly informed. (Sunday Times v. U.K. 1979)
- Open definition of the content of this right.
- Limited through „non laedere“ - no one shall restrict anyone else.
- Can be restraint by law.
- The state shall not disturb anyone who realizes his/her freedom of expression.
- No one is obliged to help to promote anyone's expression.
- FoE has many aspects.

Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms - Article 10

1. Everyone has the right to freedom of expression. This right shall include freedom to hold opinions and to receive and impart information and ideas without interference by public authority and regardless of frontiers. This Article shall not prevent States from requiring the licensing of broadcasting, television or cinema enterprises.
2. The exercise of these freedoms, since it carries with it duties and responsibilities, may be subject to such formalities, conditions, restrictions or penalties as are prescribed by law and are necessary in a democratic society, in the interests of national security, territorial integrity or public safety, for the prevention of disorder or crime, for the protection of health or morals, for the protection of the reputation or rights of others, for preventing the disclosure of information received in confidence, or for maintaining the authority and impartiality of the judiciary.

[F]reedom of expression [...] constitutes one of the essential foundations of a democratic society and one of the basic conditions for its progress and for each individual's self-fulfilment. Subject to [restrictions] it is applicable not only to "information" or "ideas" that are favourably received or regarded as inoffensive or as a matter of indifference, but also to those that offend, shock or disturb; such are the demands of that pluralism, tolerance and broadmindedness without which there is no "democratic society". Article 10 protects not only the substance of the ideas and information expressed, but also the form in which they are conveyed. (Oberschlick v. Austria)

Universal Declaration of Human Rights - Article 19.

Everyone has the right to freedom of opinion and expression; this right includes freedom to hold opinions without interference and to seek, receive, and impart information and ideas through any media and regardless of frontiers

International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights - Article 19

1. Everyone shall have the right to hold opinions without interference.
2. Everyone shall have the right to freedom of expression; this right shall include freedom to seek, receive and impart information and ideas of all kinds, regardless of frontiers, either orally, in writing or in print, in the form of art, or through any other media of his choice.
3. The exercise of the rights provided for in paragraph 2 of this article carries with it special duties and responsibilities. It may therefore be subject to certain restrictions, but these shall only be such as are provided by law and are necessary:
 - (a) For respect of the rights or reputations of others;
 - (b) For the protection of national security or of public order (ordre public), or of public health or morals.

Expression

- All verbal or non-verbal forms of communication by which is communicated some idea or opinion.
- Symbolical expression:
 - In deciding whether particular conduct possesses sufficient communicative elements to bring the First Amendment into play, we have asked whether "[a]n intent to convey a particularized message was present, and [whether] the likelihood was great that the message would be understood by those who viewed it. [Texas v. Johnson, 491 U.S. 397 (1989)]
- „Right not to speak“ [West Virginia State Board of Education v. Barnette, 319 U.S. 624 (1943)]
- free commercial speech [Casado Coca v. Spain]
- Facts
- Untrue statements
 - False information is not a value worth protecting with respect to the freedom of expression. The deliberate expression of false facts is not protected. (CSU-NPD-decision (Wahlkampf case) BVerfGE 61, 1, 1 BvR 1376/79 of June 22, 1982
 - even if there is no proof of the existence of the facts ... no crime of defamation was committed because of the absence of mens rea, when the publisher believed mistakenly in the existence of the facts and there was good reason for his mistaken belief on the basis of reliable information and grounds. (Japan; Katsuyoshi Kawachi (Judgment upon a case of defamation) 25 June 1969, Case Number (A) No. 2472 of 1966

Expression - ECHR

- „information“ or „ideas“ that are favorably received or regarded as inoffensive or as a matter of indifference.
- information or ideas that offend, shock or disturb the State or any sector of the population
- „Expression“ is not restricted to verifiable, factual data, but also includes opinions, criticism and speculation, whether or not they are objectively „true“
- political expressions
- artistic expressions
- commercial expressions
- An extensive range of media for the production, transmission and distribution of information and ideas, including speech, print, radio and television broadcasting, artistic creations, film and electronic information systems, are protected.

Restraints of freedom of expression I.

■ Provided by law:

- Firstly, the law must be adequately accessible: the citizen must be able to have an indication that is adequate in the circumstances of the legal rules applicable to a given case.
- Secondly, a norm cannot be regarded as a "law" unless it is formulated with sufficient precision to enable the citizen to regulate his conduct: he must be able - if need be with appropriate advice - to foresee, to a degree that is reasonable in the circumstances, the consequences which a given action may entail. Those consequences need not be foreseeable with absolute certainty: experience shows this to be unattainable.

- The Sunday Times v. The United Kingdom - 26 April 1979, Application No. 6538/74

Restraints of freedom of expression II.

■ Legitimate aim

- In cases concerning the press, the national margin of appreciation is circumscribed by the interest of democratic society in ensuring and maintaining a free press. Similarly, that interest will weigh heavily in the balance in determining, as must be done under paragraph 2 of Article 10, whether the restriction was proportionate to the legitimate aim pursued. (Thoma v. Luxembourg, 2001)

■ Necessary in a democratic society

- The test of "necessity in a democratic society" requires the Court to determine whether the "interference" complained of corresponded to a "pressing social need", whether it was proportionate to the legitimate aim pursued and whether the reasons given by the national authorities to justify it are relevant and sufficient. (Feldek v. Slovakia, 2001)
