Irregular forms in past tense

Textbook – page 49, grey box

 Minulý čas (část 1) • The past tense (part 1)

The highlighted expressions in the text are in the past tense. The past tense is formed in two simple steps. You'll learn the first step here and then the second on the next page.

1st step: Drop the -t from the infinitive (i.e. the dictionary form) and add -l, e.g. dělat – dělal, vstávat – vstával, dívat se – díval se, etc. By doing so you've just created the 3rd person singular known as the l-form (read: el-form). This is grammatically known as the active participle. Different endings are added to indicate gender and number:

singular	plural (simplified)
dělal, dělal	dělala
	dělalo
	dělali

The table only shows one plural form dělali. The plural forms dělali, dělaly, dělaly and dělala also exist (notice the difference in gender). The plural forms dělali, dělaly, dělaly have the same pronunciation and differ only in how they are written. The plural form dělala is only used in formal speech and writing.

Watch out: In the l-form some sound changes occur in monosyllabic verbs ending in -nout. For example, the stem vowel sound may be shortened and other stem changes may occur.

infinitive	být	chtít	číst	jist	jít	mít	moc	pít	psát	spát
-l form	byl	chtél	četl	jedl	šel, šla	měl	mohl	pil	psal	spal
