Oral Polio Vaccine: Will it Facilitate Eradication or Cause Another Pandemic?

Polio eradication is nearing with three polio-endemic countries remaining: Pakistan, Afghanistan, and Nigeria. Immunodeficient patients receiving the oral poliovirus vaccine are thought to be potential poliovirus reservoirs and may serve a threat to polio eradication. The live virus from the vaccine can continue to replicate in their system for long periods of time and increase the risk of transmission to others. This research consists of data-mining and then understanding these cases that may play a role in jeopardizing polio eradication.
