^^ All scholarship programmes require a certain level of attendance and academic performance. If students do not attend classes or do not meet the required standards, they will not receive a scholarship for that month. For this reason, scholarships are usually awarded once the monthly requirements have been met. If the university agrees to deduct tuition fees directly or to pay scholarships early, it will always be on the understanding that if the student does not meet all the study requirements and is not eligible to receive the scholarship in a given month, he/she will be responsible for paying the full tuition fees.
