SEMINAR 10

Activism

Definitions of Activism

Task 1 – Complete the definitions. Discuss your answers with your partner.

Lobbying	Protest song	Civil disobedience	Strike action
Demonstrations	Activism	Boycott	Hacktivism

1 in a general sense, can be described as intentional action to bring about social or political change. This action is in support of or in opposition to one side of an often controversial argument.

2 encompasses* the active refusal to obey certain laws, demands and commands of a government or of an occupying power without resorting to physical violence. It could be said that it is compassion in the form of respectful disagreement.

3 A is the act of abstaining from using, buying, or dealing with someone or some organization as an expression of protest or as a means of force.

4..... can consist of the private pressuring of legislative members, public actions (e.g. mass demonstrations), or combinations of both public and private actions (e.g. encouraging constituents to contact their legislative representatives). There are large differences in the effectiveness of lobby groups.

5 (a combination of hack and activism) is often understood as the writing of code, or otherwise manipulating information to promote political ideology – promoting expressive politics, free speech, human rights, or information ethics.

6 are a form of activism, usually taking the form of a public gathering at a rally* or walking in a march.

7....., often called a strike, is a work stoppage caused by the mass refusal by employees to perform work. A strike usually takes place in response to complaints that employees feel management are ignoring.

8 A..... is a song intended to protest perceived problems in society such as injustice, racial discrimination, war, globalization, inflation, social inequalities, incarceration*, the Greenhouse effect, or global warming.

Task 2 – Discussion Questions

1. Can you give specific examples for some of the above-mentioned actions?

2. Are some vital* protests taking place in the world at the moment?
3. What controversial issues have been in the centre of public debate in your region recently?
4. What social or political question do you feel strongly about?
5. What ways of protesting would you participate in? Why or why not?
6.
 - signing a petition
 - writing a letter to your MP
 - going to a demo
 - handing out leaflets
 - writing on a wall
 - attacking a building that represents what you are protesting against

Picture Description

Task 3 – Describe one of the following pictures. Where was the picture taken? When was it? Who are the people? What are they protesting?

Task 4 – Decide which reports belong to the pictures.

Protests in India over Big Brother

The “Celebrity Big Brother” race row has turned into an international incident as protestors burned effigies* of the show's organisers on the streets of India. As the number of complaints to Ofcom (The Independent regulator and competition authority of the UK communications industries) approached 20,000, senior politicians in the UK queued up to denounce the treatment of Bollywood star Shilpa Shetty on the Channel 4 show. The Indian government has also indicated that it plans to raise the issue with Britain.

Religious rally opposes new gay rights laws

The signs read “Cry Freedom” and the crowd sang “We Shall Overcome”, but it was a highly selective brand of religious liberty being demanded by a demonstration outside Britain’s parliament last night. Several hundred people, among them many children, gathered to protest against new regulations to protect gay rights to be introduced in mainland Britain in April 2007.

- A) The Power of Advertising B) Animal Rights Success
C) Cowardly Violence or Moral Crusaders? D) A Justifiable Method?
E) Big Mac Attack!

Animal Rights – A New Breed of Activism

1 We have all had leaflets thrust* into our hands featuring disturbing photographs of helpless kittens wired up* to medical experiments in research laboratories, or pictures of dirty, overcrowded conditions in factory farms. Whatever our views on animal experimentation or food production are, we cannot help but be shocked by the examples outlined in such leaflets. Animal rights groups have achieved considerable success for their causes over the years, raising awareness and keeping the issues in the public eye. With food, for example, supermarkets are selling more and more organic products and free range eggs to meet an increasing demand. With regards to vivisections*, some bans on drug and cosmetic testing on animals have been implemented and even fox-hunting was banned by the British government.

2 In the past few years, instances of animal rights violence have continually hit the headlines. Animal rights activists in Britain recently attacked 62-year-old farmer's wife Katharine Brown, while she was walking her dog in the countryside. They chained her to a fence and demanded that she and her husband close their farm, which breeds cats for medical research. Similarly last year, an Oxford University professor was attacked as he gave a lecture; in the 1970s, Professor Blakemore had been involved in using animals for medical research. His windows were smashed and his children threatened with kidnapping*. Both the Browns and Professor Blakemore insist that the activists were "misguided and misinformed" about what they do and would be willing to talk face-to-face with them about the issues concerned. The group behind many of these attacks is ALF (Animal Liberation Front), which has made no secret of its belief in the use of violence to fight for animal rights.

3 Some people in favour of animal rights would argue that violence against animals deserves violence against the humans concerned. However, most would agree that such extremism is damaging the animal cause and we are losing sympathy for the real issues.

4 The PETA (People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals) advertising campaign against McDonald's marks this shift in protest tactic: using advertising activism. No other organisation has reached PETA's level of impact by attacking one of the largest worldwide corporations. PETA has spent $200,000 so far on a campaign which is 'peanuts' in comparison to McDonald's $2 billion a year spent on advertising. However, the poster campaign has already made a lasting impression on the world's media. Many advertisers have refused to print the posters because they are too shocking by advertising standards. This negative attention has only served to heighten awareness about McDonald's already damaged reputation.

5 McDonald's has been at the centre of the "cruelty to animals" controversy since 1997, when a court ruled that it was "responsible for cruelty to animals". PETA outlined suggestions for changing the way McDonald's treats animals in its farming methods and the restaurant company agreed to change. It has now become apparent that McDonald's has not fulfilled its promises, hence the new powerful poster campaign.

4. What is PETA's tactic in campaigning against Mc Donald's?
5. What happened when McDonalds's went to court in 1997?

Listening – Dwarf Throwing

Task 9 – Read the article and discuss the questions with your partner

Until quite recently in some pubs in Australia you could see dwarfs being thrown from one end of the bar to the other by big muscled Aussies. "Dwarf throwing competitions" attracted big crowds: the dwarfs were paid a lot of money to put on a crash helmet and allow themselves to be thrown onto a mattress, located some metres away. Few were hurt and most enjoyed their sudden rise to fame.

A variation on this was "dwarf bowling", popular in England too. This "game" consisted of tying a dwarf to a skateboard and "bowling" him (again equipped with a crash helmet) rather than a ball, down the alley and against the pins. For a while, dwarf throwing competitions were used under sponsorship to raise money for charity, but some people under the auspices* of such groups as the Organisation of People of Restricted Growth objected to what they called "macabre* spectacles".

1. What must it have been like for the dwarfs?
2. How would you have felt in the same situation?

Task 10 – Listen to Australian Dave speaking about dwarf throwing and answer these questions:

1. How did Dave get involved in dwarf throwing?
2. What protection did they use after the first time?
3. Why did the "humanitarians" object to dwarf throwing and how did they find out about it?

4. Did they understand dwarf problems?
5. What kinds of things are humiliating* for dwarfs?
6. What were good points about dwarf throwing?

Task 11 – Discussion points

1. Were the 'human rights' activists right in having these activities banned, thus depriving the dwarfs of a lot of money and excitement?
2. What rights do we have in deciding what is right or best for other people?
3. Many people would agree that the following should be banned. Try to think of reasons why they shouldn't be banned: casinos, hunting, the Ku Klux Klan and other racist/fascist groups, religious sects, Satanic groups, smoking.
4. What would you like to ban at your university, in your town, country, the world?

Adopted from Discussions A – Z by Adrian Wallwork.
