

Recently, I am addicted to a TV show called Who is The Murderer. It is a plot inference variety show. According to the setting of this program, each episode of the program has six star guests present, playing different personas, including one detective, one murderer and four suspects, who are in a fixed space. They face a well planned murder together, and need to collect evidence and reasoning to find the real murderer. According to the program settings, only the murderer can lie in the whole process. In order to hide his identity, he will choose to blame others and get rid of his suspicion.

In terms of its genre, I think it should be analytical. Because in this program, guests are required find evidence they have found on the scene, collect all the evidence and then share with each other. During the process of sharing, they also need to give their own inferences about who is the murderer. On the whole, they are keeping analyzing who has the biggest motivation to kill the victim.

As for its audience, in my opinion, I think it is for teenagers and adults. This program makes people pay attention to and think about the problems in real life, and transmit positive values and positive energy while getting entertainment experience. Each episode of the program focuses on a social topic, such as internet violence, rational pursuit of stars, disease control and epidemic prevention, astronomy and space science, citizen and moral education, etc. Among them, through the setting of virtual background, the program popularized PUA (accosting artist) to the public, which is a cheating behavior against public order, good customs and legal provisions, and became the first variety show in China to prevent PUA fraud in education. But for young kids, on one hand, it is hard for them to understand the game and give inference of their own, on the other hand, the scene is a little bit sanguinary for them to watch.

Up to now, this program has launched five seasons. I have been watching the season one to season five from 2016 to now. The vital reasons for me to watch this program are two. The first one is the guests. They are not only interesting, but also show their intelligence by analyzing. In a variety show, especially related to detective plot, you need to balance the serious and humorous atmosphere. It is related to murder, so it should be serious. But it is also an entertainment program, so it should be added some interesting moments. Guests do well in the both sides. The second reason is because it is related to inference. I have quiet interest in criminal movies and books. So this program is really suitable for me to watch. Based on the evidence and find the murderer, which is excellent progress for me to join.

But along with the advantages is the shortage. I have to recognize that in the season four, the quality of this program has decreased a lot. First is the plot, which has lots of bugs in it. Five suspects' timelines were in chaos. Second is the guests, which I have admired before. With the increasing popularity of the program, the program group began to invite some famous guests. There are fewer and fewer old players. But the new players did not bring a new experience. On the contrary, they fail more and more in the process of reasoning. Honestly speaking, season four is the worst among every season. And it is also became a season which I have not watched full episodes until now. Popularity dose matter, but what matters most is the quality of this program. More ridiculous, the slogan of the fourth season is not to forget the original intention, but the fact is quite the opposite.

Season five was released two days ago. Every episode will be launched weekly. So I will watch this show weekly. But when I have spare time or want to relax myself, I would watch it randomly.

In the end, I really recommend you this program! But only season one to three! ☺
