

Are we, beings that inhabit planet Earth, alone in the universe?

We are the only once. It would be kinda frightening dont you think? If from the sudden all those films, serials, comics and books would be just some stupid farytails. Area 51 would seem like a silly joke. And the famous circles in fields, hmmm, we would have to try to find those mysterious criminals between us. No more ufos and photoshoped photographies of chimneys, street lights and airplanes. All of this is gone for good. I think the humankind would be unsatisfied and depressed, without any hope for better ourselves out there. Maybe we are alone. But we refuse to accept it because the fact that we do and see all those crazy „aliens“ things with no reason is just too much for us. So we rather believe in and make up stranger creatures which will save us when the end come.
