

Prepositions with Accusative

Durch	through, by
Für	for
Gegen	against, for
Ohne	without
Wider	Against, to, towards
Um	around, for; at (time)
Entlang	along, down -This preposition however goes after the object: Sie geht den Fluss entlang. / She is walking along the river.
Bis	until, to, by. Bis is technically an accusative preposition, but it is almost always used with a second preposition (bis zu , bis auf , etc.) in a different case, or without an article (bis April , bis Montag , bis Bonn).

Prepositions with Dative

These prepositions take the Dative case:

Aus	from, out of
Bei	at, near
Mit	with, by
Nach	after, to
Seit	since (time), for
Von	by, from
Zu	at, to
außer	except for, besides
Entgegen	Against, contrary to gegenüber	across from, opposite (can go before or after its object)
gemäß	according to, after, subject to nächst	Next to samt	Together with, along with zuwieder	against

E.g. Er trank aus der Flaschen – he drank from the bottle

Er wohnt bei seiner Grossmutter – He live with his grandmother

Two-way-prepositions: prepositions with Accusative/Dative

An	at, on, to
Auf	at, to, on, upon
Hinter	Behind
In	in, into
Neben	beside, near, next to
Über	about, above, across, over
Unter	under, among
Vor	in front of, before; ago (time)
Zwischen	between

A two-way-preposition take either an object in Accusative or Dative case all depending on the situation

When deciding on, whether a two-way-preposition has an object in Accusative or Dative you can decide so by asking either: wohin (where to) or wo (where). If it's a motion the preposition take Accusative case, and if it's a location the object take Dative case. An easy example to show this rule is:

- 1) The boy went in the house to pick up his bag -> here the boy moves from outside the house and into the house = motion
- 2) The boy is playing in the house -> here the boy stays at the same place, namely in the house = location.

Figurative sense

In case the two-way-preposition stands in a sentence, where it has a figurative sense, then the main rule is: auf and über always take Accusative case, while the rest take Dative case.

E.g. Sie freute sich über die vielen Geschenke (A) – She was pleased over all the presents
